What is the Writing Studio?
The Writing Studio offers supportive feedback to students who are developing, organizing and brainstorming papers in all disciplines. Papers are welcome at any stage of the writing process – from just getting started to final editing.
At the Bridgewater State University Writing Studio, friendly peer consultants provide helpful feedback to student writers working at all levels of the writing process.

We encourage students to bring any form of writing to us, regardless of the genre or course discipline; you can also bring personal writing or any writing from outside of your course work. In addition, we can brainstorm ideas and help you interpret assignments.

Our consultants take both walk-in clients and appointments. If you'd like to make an appointment, you may either call ahead or walk up to the front desk and write your name in our appointment book.

What can I expect from a consultation?
When you come in for a writing consultation, you'll be working one-on-one with one of our peer consultants. The consultant will sign you in and gather some basic information from you. If your professor gave you any criteria or a rubric to follow, please bring it with you. The consultant will first ask you what, in particular, you'd like feedback on. Then, he/she will read through your paper together with you, taking notes as you both read. Consultants may read your paper silently, out loud, or ask you to read it out loud. When you both finish reading, the consultant will identify the more prominent patterns and issues he/she discovered in your paper. Patterns can range from recurrent errors in grammar, to consistent lack of textual evidence or support, to organizational concerns, and beyond. Next, the consultant will go over both his/her concerns and your own, providing you with feedback that prompts you to make your own revisions. Note that our writing consultants won't write on your paper or direct you through every area of concern; rather, we ask questions and make suggestions in order to guide students to make their own changes.
